4 Vocabulary (LEMUR)

5 Listen Three Times

Most English learners focus on the wrong things for too long. These 5 keys are what actually move the needle — focus on them consistently and your English will surprise you.

1

KEY ONE

Pronunciation & Sounds

English has 44 sounds — and some of them don't exist in your language. This is why even advanced learners are sometimes hard to understand. Until you learn what to do with your tongue, lips and mouth to produce these sounds, clarity will always be a struggle.

Start by learning basic phonetics — the symbols that represent each sound. Even learning just a few changes everything. Every new word you learn, you'll know exactly how to say it.

TRY THIS

Take one sound you struggle with (e.g. the /θ/ in "think"). Find 5 words that use it. Practise them slowly and deliberately every day for a week. Then find 5 more.

RESULT You speak more clearly. Natives understand you more easily — and you feel more confident every time you open your mouth.

2

KEY TWO

Connected Speech

Native speakers don't say words one by one. They link them together, drop sounds, and blend words in ways that sound nothing like the written version. This is why fast English can feel like a mystery — even when you know every word individually.

Shadowing — repeating at exactly the same time as a native speaker — is one of the most powerful tools you can use to master this.

TRY THIS

Find a short audio clip (1-2 sentences) of a native speaker. Listen three times. Then shadow it — say it at exactly the same time, copying the rhythm and linking. Repeat until it feels natural.

RESULT Fast native speakers suddenly make sense. You understand podcasts, TV shows and colleagues at work — and your own speech sounds more natural too.

3

KEY THREE

Grammar — Learn in Chunks

Native speakers don't build sentences word by word. They speak in chunks — blocks of language that go naturally together. Instead of constructing "I would like to have" from five separate words, a fluent speaker reaches for the whole chunk at once.

Think about how you say a phone number. You don't say each digit individually — you group them in threes or fours. Language works the same way. Learn in chunks and you stop making mistakes with prepositions, articles, and word order.

TRY THIS

Instead of learning the word "depend" — learn the chunk "it depends on." Instead of "interested" — learn "I'm really interested in." Write down 3 chunks you hear this week and practise each one in a real sentence.

RESULT You speak more fluently and naturally — building sentences in blocks rather than searching for individual words. Fewer mistakes, less hesitation, more confidence.

KEY FOUR

Vocabulary — The LEMUR Method

Never memorise vocabulary from a list. The most effective — and most enjoyable — way to build your vocabulary is through real materials: TV shows, YouTube videos, articles, books. Things that actually interest you.

The method is simple. I call it LEMUR:

L Learn by...

E Exposure — read or listen to something real and interesting.

M Meaning — look up the words you don't know.

U Understanding — read or listen again. Now it all makes sense.

R Repetition — use each new word within 24 hours of learning it.

That final step is the one most learners skip — and it's the most important. Using a word within 24 hours moves it from short-term to long-term memory.

 TRY THIS

Watch a short YouTube video or read an article on a topic you enjoy. Find 3-5 new words. Look them up, watch or read again, then use each word in a sentence about your own life — today, not tomorrow.

Vocabulary stops feeling like study and starts feeling like discovery. You remember what you learn because it comes from real content — and you use it because you practised it straight away.

KEY FIVE

Listen Three Times

Your ear needs training just as much as your grammar or vocabulary. The key is short, focused, repeated listening — not watching 2-hour films and hoping something sticks.

Watch or listen to the same short clip multiple times. First for general understanding. Then for vocabulary. Then without subtitles. Each time you listen, you'll catch more — and feel great about it.

 TRY THIS

Choose a 3-5 minute clip in English. Watch it 3 times: first for the general idea, then with subtitles to catch new words, then without subtitles. Do this regularly and your ear will transform.

RESULT Fast speakers stop being a mystery. You start catching words and phrases you used to miss — and your confidence with real English grows every single day.
